The Standard Industrial Classification, a numerical code scheme, is a system developed for classifying companies and enterprises according to the activity (ies) in which they are engaged.

The SIC system categorizes all industry groups using two-digit code and then further segments lines of business by four-digit codes.

Uses of SIC Codes

(1) Market segmentation: Enables grouping of customers into major industry groups (manufacturers, wholesalers, retailers or service) and their line of business

(2) Market size estimation: Helps estimate the size of the market based on the number of businesses classified in each segment or subsegment

(3) Research: Facilitates analysis of financial statistics and related data

As markets evolve and new industries emerge, the Canadian SIC Codes have been consistently updated to reflect the changing economy.

The following SIC table is your first step to identify your prospects and target new business.

Use the latest 2004 Canadian SIC Codes, provided only by D&B to reach your target market. If you need a more granular search based on 8-digit SIC codes, contact us today at 1.800.INFO.DNB (1.800.463.6362).
